

A Ball, a Dog, and a Monkey: 1957---The Space Race Begins

Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Michael D'Antonio captures the wackiness of the first year of the space race as the Americans scrambled desperately to match the Soviets and President Eisenhower intervened to guarantee that the space program would not be run by the military.

On October 4, 1957, the Soviet Union successfully launched Sputnik I, the first artificial satellite into orbit around the earth. Little more than a month later, the Soviets launched Sputnik II. News of Sputnik created panic in Washington, D.C., and throughout the United States. Within days, the U.S. military began a madcap race to space full of crashes, skullduggery, and backstabbing until Eisenhower's secret civilian program surpassed the Soviets by putting the first American—a hero monkey named Gordo—into orbit. D'Antonio draws on archives, film footage, and interviews with many of the scientists, reporters, and others who were involved in the first year of the space race. He recounts the early days of the space race with all the zaniness and urgency of the time, just in time for fiftieth anniversary commemorations.

Portland's Solar Equipment Installation Experts Referral SOLAR Save Money Help the Environment Gain Power Independence Learn About the Benefits of Solar Panels

"I had solar panels installed on my roof in July. Rob from Referral solar is very experienced and professional. He gave me recommendations based on my home and helped me choose from the different payment options based on my budget."

Judy C.

"I'm using zero net electricity and that feels wonderful. I've had the system up and running for two months now, and the results are better than I expected!"

Daniel M.

"I would highly recommend Referral Solar Portland to everyone! They installed solar panels at my home about a year ago. We've had rain since the install and no leaks to report. The energy we've been generating is consistent and clean. I couldn't be more pleased."
