

Mr. Wonderful

When New York City mobsters pull off a major jewel heist at the site of the World Trade Center on 9/11, they had no idea that the events of that day would have led to their crime going completely undetected. Now all they have to do is lay low and hide the diamonds. The mob boss turns to his trusted accountant, John Magi to stash them and later turn them into cash. The plan goes without a hitch that is until rogue FBI agents learn of the crime and have other plans. Now with the mobsters under the impression that John double-crossed them, stole the loot, and testified against them, he has no other choice but to fake his own death in order to protect his wife and young daughter from retaliation. Fifteen years later, when all of his enemies are either dead or imprisoned, John decides to come out of hiding and reclaim the life he once enjoyed. The only problem is, his wife has since remarried, and there is a new man of the house.
